ROBBING A STARVING WOMAN.

A Lawyer Accused of a Strange Crime.

A DEED OF PROPERTY WORTH $20 000 TAKEN FROM A HOUSE IN EAST SEVENTY NINTH ST IN DAYLIGHT—NARROW ESCAPE OF CAPTAIN GUNNER—THEORY OF A CONSPIRACY

Captain Gunner and Detective Campbell of the Fifty ninth Street Police Station, went before Justice Powers at Police Headquarters last night with James H Elliott a lawyer, of No 51 William street, that he might obtain bail on the charge of having broken into the house of Emmeline Laurent, No 56 East Seventy ninth street, on Saturday morning and having stolen a transfer deed of property worth $20,000 and other valuable papers Captain Gunner stated that on Saturday evening about 7 30 o'clock he was summoned to the house of Benjamin S Clark on an urgent matter He went to the place with Detective Campbell, and was told by Mr Clark that on Saturday morning James H Elliott during his own absence from home, had passed through his house into the back yard, had crossed to the rear of Madame Laurent's house, had entered this at the second floor, had remained there for ten hours and had then gone away Mr Clark was anxious that the place should be searched as he had seen no one go from the house since that time, and he did not know but what the occupant was dead

Captain Gunner, with Detective Campbell and Mr Clark then entered Madame Laurent's house from the rear by means of the second floor balcony and the window All the doors of the building were locked They went from room to room, from the cellar up, until they reached a door on the second floor, rear, which was locked On breaking this open, the Captain found that he had entered Madame Laurent's bedroom She lay in bed in an apparently unconscious condition. She appeared to be a woman about thirty years of age, a brunette of slender form and of handsome face The Captain endeavored to rouse her and succeeded after several attempts The woman, for a few moments, seemed in a dazed condition, but at length regained power of speech enough to tell the Captain her story.

Madame Laurent said that on Wednesday morning she had locked up her house fastened herself in her room and had then gone to bed with the intention of starving herself to death. 'I was tired of living, and desired only to die, she said. She remained in bed until Saturday morning, having eaten nothing

In the forenoon of that day Madame Laurent lay in a semi-unconscious condition, when she was roused by the appearance of a man inside the rear window of her room, which he had evidently just entered She was startled, but was too weak to speak above a whisper and Elliott approached her bedside, when she said "I am going to die I desire to live no longer. When I am dead send my body to France for burial"

Elliott declined to do this and then added "If you wish to die you can, it is an easy matter, only a question of a minute or two"

Finding that Elliott would not accede to her request, she then pointed to a pet cat, which was in the room and asked him to take care of it Elliott promised to do so Elliott then proceeded to examine Madame Laurent's legal papers, which were secretary about the room She was too weak to make any opposition, and Elliot proceeded his search at his leisure After remaining some hours, the lawyer departed, taking a transfer deed of certain property in Twenty-fifth street, made out in the name of Elliott Smith to Emmeline Laurent, which was valued at $20,000 Madame Laurent said that she had purchased this property, paying $20,000 for it, in Smith's name under what inducements, she did not say Smith in return had drawn up this document for the nominal transfer of the property to her This paper Elliott had taken. It had been drawn up by him and by Smith, who was his cousin Madame Laurent claimed that Elliott had taken other papers also. He carried away the pet cat in a basket.

After obtaining the woman's story, Captain Gunner sent for an ambulance surgeon at the Presbyterian Hospital The latter on his arrival finally induced Madame Laurent to take some nourishment, and then advised, in accordance with her wish, that she should be left at her home Captain Gunner and Detective Campbell were unable to find either Elliott or Smith on Saturday night They did not leave Madame Laurent's house until nearly midnight. Yesterday morning they went to the University Building and there arrested Elliott He acknowledged having gone to the house and having taken the transfer deed, and admitted that he probably had done wrong in entering the building and securing the paper as he did The document and the pet cat were found in his room. Smith was not to be found. Mr Elliott stated that his cousin had been out of the city for several days.

Mr Elliott was taken to the Fifty-ninth street Station and given an opportunity to secure bail. He sent for Thaddeus Judson, a miner, for whom he had acted as counsel for over twelve years. Captain Gunner telegraphed to Police Headquarters, requesting that Justice Powers should be sent for, as he would be there with his prisoner at 4 30 o'clock Justice Powers went to Headquarter at that hour, but as the prisoner was not on hand the case was put down for 7 30 o'clock. It was an hour after that before the captain appeared. Justice Powers was unwilling to accept Mr. Judson as bondsman, and Captain Gunner accordingly took his prisoner back to the police station, where he was locked up to be brought before Justice Kilbreth this morning.

Before leaving the Central Office, Mr. Elliott told the Justice that when the proper time came he could explain his action. Mr. Elliott, throughout the time he was before the Justice, was in a state of great excitement, although he succeeded in concealing his feelings somewhat. When appealed by the Tribune reporter he turned excitedly and said peremptorily. "Not a word! I have nothing to say. It will be of no use to go to my room or to my office to get an expression of views from me. I don't intend to put myself in a false position by talking."

After Captain Gunner had made his statement to the Justice, Mr. Elliott added with a dry smile "There's one thing you have forgotten, Captain."

"What's that?"

Mr. Elliott pointed to a small basket on the desk, whence came a decided mew just then

'Oh, yes," the captain said, "I had forgotten the cat." He had not then mentioned it.

"Madame said she was dying, and I told her it was only a matter of a minute or two. As I did not promise to bury her in France, I did promise to take the cat. There she is."

Detective Campbell took the cat along at his departure. Mr Clark was seen at his home later by a Tribune reporter He said 'On Friday evening at about 7 30 o'clock, my door-bell rang and I went to the door in person A man whom I did not know seemed to recognize me at once, for he said 'Oh, Mr Clark, how do you do? I told him he had the advantage of me, when he produced his card, on which was the name James H Elliott Mr Elliott then told me he had heard me argue a case in Brooklyn, and although he had not seen me since that time, he recognized me as soon as I opened the door

'I asked him in and after a few general remarks he inquired after 'Madame' I did not know what he meant, when he added, 'Madame Laurent, who lives next door I knew nothing about her save that she had been living at No 56 since May 1 with a man whom I supposed to be her husband. I had heard she was an actress She was generally believed to be wealthy, as she owned the house where she lived, and another two doors west Madame was believed to be worth in the neighborhood of $100,000 Mr Elliott, on finding I knew little about the woman said that he was anxious to see her He had been unable to get into her house for he had tried the door bell and had found the house apparently deserted. He feared that she might be ill, possibly dead, and he was therefore anxious to get into the house The truth was, he said, he had some important legal papers which he wished to consult with her about. He produced certain documents in that connection I said he might see her so far as I was concerned but I could not show him the way

"Mr Elliott then suggested that he might go out on my front veranda and step from it to the veranda of Madame Laurent's house, on the second floor I consented He went upon her veranda and knocked at the windows, calling out 'Madame' He came back, saying that he could arouse no one, After a second chat Mr Elliott suggested that he should try the back of the house as there were the rear verandas also. After receiving strict injunctions from me that he should under no circumstances enter the house, as I would not countenance such a proceeding he went into my back yard and on the back veranda, trying doors and windows, but without effect. He then returned to my house a second time. I had heard of the man by name, and as he had borne a good reputation, and thinking myself that something might have befallen Madame Laurent I allowed him the privilege he had suggested On his second return, we talked of legal matters and cases I had been engaged in, until finally Mr Elliott began asking questions about the people living next door east—Madame Laurent's house being, of course, west. Then he asked me regarding the walls of the house whether they were of brick and whether any one talking or ordinary sounds could be heard through them I did not suspect what he was aiming at, so I told him no' at a venture He finally went away I had told him that Madame Laurent might possibly be out, as she was an actress So he said he would return in the morning and call on her. On my return from down town on Saturday night I found my wife and the neighbors in a great state of excitement Mr Elliott, it seems in my absence, and knowing that I would be from home, had gone to my house in the morning, had seen the cook—my wife being up stairs—and said he wished to go through the house to the rear, in order to enter the next house This he had done by leaping the fence and climbing up a vine to the second floor veranda, and then forcing open a window and going into the house I sent for a policeman at once and Captain Gunner and Detective Campbell came to my house We then went to Madame Laurent's I declined to go in myself until the captain made me a peace commitatus The rest of the story the captain has told you."

Captain Gunner had a narrow escape from death at the hands of Madame Laurent, after he had gone into her room After the arrival of Dr Carroll, the ambulance surgeon, the captain went out of the bedroom, leaving the doctor in it He had scarcely gone out when he heard a great commotion inside He turned just in time to see Dr Carroll tumbling headlong down a flight of stairs that led from the bed room Madame Laurent, who was partially out of her head, took a great dislike to the doctor, and, in a moment of frenzy, jumped up, seized him violently and pushed him down the stairs Captain Gunner rushed into the room, but stopped suddenly just inside the door Madame Laurent stood before him with blazing eyes and held pointing before her directly at the captain a pretty person a huge Colt's revolver over a foot long and with chambers loaded The madame's finger was on the trigger, and she evidently meant to fire The captain looked her in the eye, drew up his hand with finger crooked as if about to fire his own weapon and said

"Put that down or I'll shoot you on the spot" Madame quailed before the captain's eye and dropped the revolver

The exact meaning of the conduct of Mr Elliott seemed a little uncertain in the eyes of the police officials last night. There were innuendoes made regarding a conspiracy to get hold of the fortune of Madame Laurent, believed to possess Yet whether Mr Elliott's actions in going to the house of Mr Clark, his inquiries concerning the nature of the walls, and whether or not sounds could be heard through them, his relationship to Mr Smith, and the announcement of Madame Laurent that she wished to die, would bear out the hypothesis of a robbery and a conspiracy, the police were unwilling to say They looked wise on this point. Mr Elliott put a brave face and a determined front on the matter, yet seemed to realize that he was in a most uncomfortable position. He admitted having taken the deed from the house, yet denied taking any thing else, except the cat Madame Laurent, however, informed Captain Gunner that Mr. Elliott took other valuable papers.

Madame Laurent was reported to be improving late last night. She seemed to have given over her idea of self starvation, for she sent a note to Mr. Clark, in which she stated that she was too weak to see any reporters but that within a few days she would be strong enough to receive their calls. She would then be glad to tell all the circumstances of the affair

Madame Laurent did not state definitely her reason for wishing to end her life, but it is supposed that Smith had grown weary of her and had made this plan to her, What influence he had used to induce her to put the Twentieth street property in his name, she did not say It is supposed that Smith led the woman to give the property over to him on the promise of "making it all right" by the transfer deed, which was never recorded and which Elliott stole.

In Elliott, Friday of last week, Mrs. J W Knight, a lady between 50 and 60 years of age, fell through a hatchway in the floor of the barn-loft, striking on a wagon that was standing in the barn below. She was insensible for over an hour, and, though the doctor reported no bones broken, it was feared she was dangerously injured internally.

Capt. Charles T. Keene reports that while fishing off the coast recently, his crew, in surrounding a school of fish, took in a whale fully 80 feet long. The seine was not constructed for that sort of fish and consequently it was badly damaged and the whale made his escape.

A fire occurred in the picker room of Faulkner's woolen mill, Turner Saturday There was a little delay in setting a stream on the fire from the force pump, but when the whole force of the powerful wheel was put on, and it got fairly into business, the room was soon deluged and the fire extinguished It looked dark for a few minutes before the hose was attached, and the stream put on the fire A gale was prevailing at the time, and had the picker room gone, the whole factory and the entire lower part of the village must have been destroyed The loss will be $300 or $400

THURSDAY, SEPT. 21, 1882.

Vermont Republican papers expect the re-election of the Hon. J. L. Martin as Speaker of their House of Representatives by the almost unanimous vote of the Republican members.

The fusion of the Democrats and Greenbackers in Michigan has not alarmed the Republicans of that State. They are not committing the blunder of ignoring it, but after admitting all its possibilities, the most careful party men believe that the Republican ticket will be elected by at least 25 000 majority.

The Delaware Republicans are making an energetic canvass and have strong hopes of carrying the State. Heretofore the elections have gone by default, the Democrats having everything their own way. But this year the Republicans are showing unusual energy and are asking the assistance of some of the best stump speakers in the party.

The Democrats hope to make several gains in Congressmen in Illinois this fall. They base their expectations on the unusual number of independent candidates in the field, which they imagine will operate in their favor But their are some bolting Democratic candidates also, and they are likely to render the election of more than one Bourbon doubtful.

Colonel D B Henderson Secretary of the Republican Congressional Campaign Committee and candidate for Congress in the IIId Iowa District, will, it is predicted, receive nearly the solid vote of both parties He is as popular with the Democrats as with his own party There are two candidates in the field against him—a Democrat and a Greenbacker

The trouble which the anti temperance attitude of the party has brought to the Democrats of Indiana grows more serious every day. The Evansville Courier, the leading Democratic organ of the 1st Congressional District, has within a few days taken decided ground in favor of compelling the saloons to close on Sunday. This new departure has created a commotion in the party ranks, as it is considered only the beginning of a break.

The petroleum trade of Pennsylvania had such a boom last week, in consequence of the rise of sixteen cents in the price of oil, that the actual sales at Oil City were reported as having been 41,000,000 barrels of oil during the week, while at Pittsburg the sales achieved 21 000,000 of gallons. This shows that all the speculation in the country is not confined to grain and fancy stocks, and that petroleum is sometimes a very lively article.

The fortifications of the city of Paris having utterly failed to secure the defence of the city in the recent German war, it is now proposed by the government of the Republic to demolish the works and to occupy the ground with houses for the people, which would certainly be very wise and useful as none of the large cities in England or the United States are provided with such defences, which indeed seem to be the relics of the dark ages

The Portland Advertiser, in full view of the returns of the recent election, has the effrontery to declare that its assertion last spring that the Fourth District was "hopelessly lost" and that the Eastern Districts had no chance except to be pulled through on a general ticket, "was not slander, it was not even a mistake". A paper so utterly reckless in its dishonesty is not worthy of serious notice

The San Francisco Bulletin contains the rather original statement that Maine voted for five Representatives to Congress this year, although entitled to but four, because there has been no opportunity to redistrict the State since the Apportionment act was passed. It adds that it is probable that "the whole five will be allowed to sit in the next Congress This will be regarded as news in Maine

The fears which have been expressed that our public lands throughout the west would be absorbed in large tracts by individuals, to the detriment of the small farmers, are not borne out by the facts. Statistics from Illinois show that within the past twelve years, although all the public lands had been settled previously, the number of farms have increased twenty five per cent, the average number of acres in each at this time being but 242

North Carolina is naturally a Republican State and it is not surprising to learn that the overthrow of Bourbonism there this fall is anticipated with confidence by the Republican Congressional Committee. The people of North Carolina are heartily tired of ring rule. They are beginning to realize that if Northern capital and enterprise are to be attracted to their State, there must be honesty in public affairs and less persecution for political opinions For some time it has been apparent that a slight change in public sentiment was all that was needed to bring about the overthrow of Bourbon ring-masters, for they have been kept in power only by a small majority. This change in public opinion now seems to have taken place, and the result of the struggle becomes a matter of National interest and importance.—Tribune

It is stated that the official report of the receipts and expenditures of the Post Office Department will show that for the last fiscal year the department earned at least one million dollars in excess of its expenditures. It is 32 years since the postal service of the United States ceased to be self-sustaining, and for the last ten years it has shown an annual average deficiency of about five millions of dollars. Since 1850 the extent of post routes in miles has nearly doubled, the number of post offices has more than doubled, the salaries of post-masters have increased five and one-half times, and the cost of transporting the mails eight times. The achievement of placing our postal system on a paying basis is one for which the credit belongs almost solely to Mr. Thomas L. James. In the hands of a man less able and resolute than he the task would have been impossible, and had he done nothing more than restore honest administration to the star route department of his office he would have deserved the lasting gratitude of his fellow-countrymen.—N. Y. Times.

THE DEMOCRATIC STATE CONVENTION.

[Boston Journal]

Never was there a more cut-and-dried political assemblage in Massachusetts than that held in Music Hall Tuesday. The entire programme except the nomination of General Butler was arranged the night before the convention and presented to that body by a committee. While the name of General Butler elicited a shout, the Convention was anything but enthusiastic compared with the recent Democratic Conventions controlled by the Butler element. The platform, which is the reputed production of the gentleman who, for twenty years, denounced Democratic ideas and practices without reserve, contains little that is essentially Democratic The babble about "inviolate States of an inviolable Union" is a Democratic phrase fully offset by the word nation with a capital "N" The declaration for civil service reform and the principles of the Pendleton bill is hypocritical. Should the Democratic party come into power tomorrow, the very men who wrote, reported and passed that resolution would demand the removal of every Republican in the Boston Custom House to make room for Democratic workers There would be no examinations and no regard for 'ascertained fitness"

The men who could do most to promote the interests of the Democratic party, or who had the most influential backing, would be given the offices. When Judge Abbott and his friends secured control of the National House, maimed Union soldiers were hustled out of places in the control of that body, to make room for Democratic workers Moreover, no man has so constantly sneered at civil service reformers and been a more persistent devotee of the spoils system than Gen Butler. He is on record against every effort to reform the civil service in the manner indicated by the Pendleton bill. While in Congress no man ever demanded so large a share of the Federal patronage for his personal friends. None were so eager as General Butler to remove good officials to make room for his own henchmen Of all men who have represented Massachusetts in Congress during the present generation, Gen. Butler has been most conspicuous as a claimer and distributor of political offices as rewards to his personal friends. In view of Gen. Butler's record, the placing of him upon the platform of Dorman B Eaton and George William Curtis is a piece of impudence that is scarcely equaled by the unblushing hypocrisy and falsehood of the assumption that, in the event of Democratic success in the country, the members of the Music Hall Convention would not shout in chorus for the removal of every Republican office holder with the utmost celerity.

General Butler has been an aspirant for the Chief Magistracy of this Commonwealth for nearly a quarter of a century In 1859, as the candidate of the Democratic party, he was beaten by General N. F Banks. In 1860, as the candidate of the Breckenridge or Jefferson Davis Democracy, he was beaten by the Republican, the Douglas-Democratic and the American candidates. In 1871 General Butler attempted to capture the Republican nomination for Governor, but was beaten by Hon W B Washburn. In 1878, Gen Butler captured the Democratic Convention and ran as the Greenback Democratic-Citizens candidate, and was beaten by Hon. Thomas Talbot. In 1879, General Butler ran as a Democratic-Liberal candidate, and was beaten by Hon. John D. Long. In 1871 1878 and 1879, his friends claimed his success to be beyond question Nevertheless he was beaten by decided pluralities in two elections and by a clear majority in 1879

There is no reason in the nature of things why he should run so well in 1882 as in 1878 when there was general discontent, lack of employment and quite general despondency as to the financial future. If factories were running half time, if the streets were full of men who could find no employment, if the wolf was at the door of two-thirds of the families in the Commonwealth, General Butler, as the leader of discontent, might hope for success Such is not the case Never were the people of Massachusetts so generally prosperous as they are to-day, and they are prosperous because General Butler, and his fiat money heresies of 1878 were rejected that year and the Republican policy of resumption of specie payments was carried into operation in spite of his persistent efforts to defeat it. Sensible people in Massachusetts when they come to think of it, will see that the prosperity of the country followed close upon the rejection of General Butler's financial heresies. As sensible people, when they come to think of it, they will not conclude that it is either sensible or prudent to elect the candidate of a Greenback Democratic party in 1882.

The Aroostook Republican presents the name of Hon. Llewellyn Powers as a candidate for the Speakership

The New York Tribune says Business has been quite active since the month began, and in some branches it is larger than ever before. The exchanges at New York, after allowance for transactions in stocks, were about $152 000,000, or, 13.3 per cent larger during the first half of September than during the corresponding time last year, and in the other cities the decrease in exchanges was much smaller in the first week of September than it has been in other recent weeks Great activity in provisions has resulted from the sharp decline in prices, and an improved demand for export has caused some recovery in value. Petroleum has advanced with large transactions in refined for export, as well as in certificates on speculation. Heavy sales have been made of hops, with firm prices, sugar has been in better demand, and there has been an irregular but active movement in naval stores. It is said that 15,000,000 pounds of Lake copper were sold last week for future delivery at eighteen cents, and the prospect that the great strike is about to end has caused some strengthening of prices in iron. The dry goods trade generally reports larger sales to date than those of the corresponding period last year, particularly in imported goods, though transactions were to some extent temporarily interrupted last week. The tone of that trade is one of strong confidence.

REPRESENTATIVE CARLISLE ADMITS HIS PARTY'S WEAKNESS

[From Oath is The Cincinnati Enquirer]

We were beaten in the last as in the previous elections by the conservative business element, which, taking counsel of its fears, dashed our hopes even in unexpected places. Instead of repeating military and other experiments, we should find out a man, if there be such a one, who commands the business confidence of the country. I do not undertake to say that I know of any such person just at this moment, but if there be such a person we ought to look to him. The Democratic party has been beaten, probably, for some years past by Democrats voting for the Republican candidate for President, under some notion that the evils they have passed through they already know. That is the disadvantage of any party long out of administration; the good that it might do is not put to its credit, while the amount of evil its opponents have done is discounted in favor of our opponents. With great respect for General Hancock, I apprehend that some business men have thought that he was not sufficiently familiar with business legislation to throw the influence of his office for business results, while his party perhaps outweighted him in its political experience.

THE STATE MUSTER.

A Wet Day in Camp.

AUGUSTA, Sept. 20. Cloudy skies and occasional showers made life on the muster field unpleasant this forenoon. The soldiers have now settled into the monotony of camp life, and one day's proceedings are largely a rehearsal of the preceding day. The feature of this forenoon was skirmish match, the shooting companies firing at targets as skirmishers, at irregular distances, off hand. At 10 o'clock came battalion drill which lasted until noon.

The afternoon was devoted to drill and dress parade. The skirmish match was won by Company C, of Dexter, 45 men, scoring 393; Company F, Augusta, 42 men, scored 323; Company E, Skowhegan, 48 men, scored 300.

Tomorrow the entire command will assist in the ceremonies of dedicating the Augusta Soldiers' Monument. Gov. Plaisted will review the militia in the afternoon.

An Unsuccessful Attempt to Detain his Captor.

LITTLE ROCK, Sept. 20. This morning Lieut. Taylor, of the 9th U. S. Cavalry, with six soldiers, reached Little Rock having in charge the noted Oklahama Payne and twelve followers, consisting of ten men and two women. They were arrested near Fort Reno as tresspassers on the Indian Territory. Payne got out a writ of habeas corpus, but Taylor refused to surrender the party to civil authorities, saying his orders were to deliver them to the U. S. Marshal at Fort Smith. An order was then issued arresting Taylor for contempt of court, but he would not permit the sheriff to arrest him, and the former was unable to do so by force. The prisoners left for Fort Smith on the first train arriving there this morning.

MASSACHUSETTS REPUBLICANS.

Bishop Nominated for Governor.

Massachusetts Republicans.

WORCESTER, Sept. 20. At 11 o'clock the Republican State Convention was called to order in Mechanics Hall by Henry Cabot Lodge of Nahant. The call for the Convention was read by Secretary Haskell and a temporary organization was effected by the choice of Hon. Charles A. Scott, of Lowell, as President and E. H. Haskell, of Gloucester, as Vice President. Scott, upon assuming the duties of the chair, after returning thanks for the honor, said:

"You are here, gentlemen, representing the Republican party of Massachusetts, who have intrusted to you the duty of selecting their candidates, a duty which is in no wise affected by the action of the Democratic Convention yesterday. We have met the gentleman named by that convention. Recognizing the importance of the business of the convention and the length of time which it will take to complete it, I will not detain you longer."

Rev. Mr. Ela, of Worcester, then offered prayer. After prayer the temporary President explained that the convention was seated by counties arranged in alphabetical order. It is expected that the delegates will vote by counties.

On motion of Charles Francis Adams, Jr., a Committee on Permant Organization was appointed also committees on Credentials and Resolutions.

On motion of Mr. Hobat, of Braintree, it was ordered that all resolutions be referred to the Committee on Resolutions without debate. Members of Congress and the State Central Committee were invited to seats on the platform.

Faxon, of Quincy, offered the following resolutions which were received with applause:

Resolved, That the Republicans of Massachusetts welcome back into their ranks the third party prohibitionists, assuring them and all others who sympathize in the cause of temperance and prohibition, that in the future the Republican party will do all in its power to amend the Constitution of the State that the manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquors as a beverage shall be prohibited.

Resolved, That a radical change in the jury law is demanded, that law breakers should not be empanelled as jurors to try criminals, thus rendering the law a farce and a cheat.

Resolved, That a respect for law can only be obtained by having vigorous enforcing powers administered impartially.

The Committee on Permanent Organization made the following report which was adopted.

President, Hon. Geo. F. Hoar, of Worcester, and numerous vice presidents; Secretaries, Edward Haskell, of Gloucester, Geo. Foster, of Boston, Geo. S. Merrill, of Lawrence, Benj. Pitman, of Marblehead, Frank D. Allen, of Lynn, and Arthur Robinson, of North Adams.

When the name of Senator Hoar was read as presiding officer there was a burst of applause and some person shouted, "He voted for the River and Harbor Bill." This created a momentary excitement, during which there were hisses and cries of "put him out," but Chairman Scott said, "Let no such exhibition occur in this Convention; every man is entitled to the conviction of his opinions." This was greeted with applause which was prolonged for some time, when the chair again read the name of Senator Hoar.

On motion of Mr. Benj. Pitman, of Marblehead, that gentleman and Hon. Charles Francis Adams, Jr., of Quincy, and Samuel S. Rigg, of Cambridge, were appointed as a committee to wait upon Mr. Hoar and present him to the Convention. Mr. Hoar, as he appeared upon the platform, was received with a hearty round of applause.

At the conclusion of Mr. Hoar's speech the Committee on Credentials reported 1287 delegates present.

An informal ballot resulted as follows: Whole number of votes, 1225; Robert E. Bishop had 673; W. W. Crapo, 504; scattering, 113. Recess.

The announcement of the informal ballot was received with great applause when the vote of Bishop was given. The Convention reassembled at 2 o'clock. A motion was made that the next convention be held in Boston, but Senator Hoar decided that the motion could not be entertained except by unanimous consent. Dr. French, of Lawrence, offered a resolution in favor of Woman Suffrage, which was referred to the Committee on Resolutions. Attorney-General Marston said the representatives of the Republican party had come here in no spirit of faction for one man. Therefore in the interest of harmony he moved that the informal ballot be directed formal and Robert P. Bishop, of Newton, be nominated by acclamation. The motion was carried amidst thundering applause. He then moved that the State Central Committee be instructed to call the next State Convention in Boston. The motion was received with evident favor, but Mr. Faxon hoped it would not prevail. The motion was carried by a large majority and the change was received with applause.

Hon. Henry B. Pierce, of Abbington, was nominated by acclamation for Secretary of State. Daniel A. Gleason was nominated for Treasurer and Receiver General.

The Convention proceeded to ballot for candidate for Attorney General. Hon. Chas. R. Ladd, of Springfield, was nominated by acclamation as a candidate for Auditor. On an informal ballot for Lieut. Governor, Oliver Ames had 573, Charles J. Noyes 321, Col. J. S. Harwood, 283 and the balance scattering. Oliver Ames was then declared the nominee by acclamation.

E. J. Sherman, of Lawrence, was nominated for Attorney-General.

The platform was then read by Congressman Robinson, and after fruitless attempts by H. B. Faxon to have his liquor resolution inserted, the resolutions were adopted. They reaffirm allegiance to Republican principles, demand free ballot and fair count, favor protection of American industries, urge measures to increase our commerce and ship building, favor common school system, demand rigid economy in State and National affairs and reform of civil service.

The resolutions concluded with a hearty greeting to the Republicans of Maine that they have so triumphantly redeemed the State from the shameful rule of usurpation, knavery and fraud practiced and countenanced by their political opponents, and that they have joined the advance with Oregon and Vermont for assuring victories in the coming campaign.

In view of the recent redistricting of the State a resolution was passed that the various Congressional Conventions be called by a majority of the District Committee of the old districts residing in the new districts.

The Convention then adjourned.

NEW YORK REPUBLICANS.

Judge Folger Nominated for Governor.

SARATOGA, Sept. 20. The delegates are taking their seats in the Republican State Convention in a very orderly manner. The doors will not be open to the public until the delegates are seated. Remarkable quiet has pervaded the village; the various factions seem determined to await the outcome of events in the Convention. At 10 o'clock the Albany Grant Club with a band marched from the depot and proceeded down Broadway, attracting much attention.

F. K. Thurber, with the anti-monopoly delegation, have taken prominent seats in the gallery. At 11:26 the Convention was called to order by B. Platt Carpenter, chairman of the State Committee. Secretary John W. Woodman read the call for the Convention. Rev. Geo. W. Brown offered prayer. The roll was then called. E. S. Madden was nominated temporary chairman.

An anti-Monopoly communication was read, which concludes as follows:

We ask the Republican party of this State to insert the following declarations in its platform, and to place in nomination candidates whose character and integrity are such as will be a guarantee, if they are elected, that they will carry them into effect; Corporations are the creation of the State and should be controlled by the State; Railroad commissions shall have a fair trial; stock watering and unjust discrimination should be prohibited; free passes should be abolished and more efficient laws against the crime of bribery and to secure the purity of the ballot should be effected. Our canals which during the season of navigation are potent in preventing exhorbitant charges by railroads should be maintained free of tolls; the legislative right of taxation is unrestricted; there should be equality in taxation; it is unjust that real estate should bear, as it now does, nearly 90 per cent of the burden of taxation; we demand that the assessment laws be revised so that personal and corporate property will pay its fair proportion of the taxes.

Among the signatures of the communication are Thomas Kinsella, John F. Henry, F. B. Thurber and others.

Recess till 4 o'clock.

At 4:25 P. M. the Convention was called to order. After a long discussion over the report of the committee on contested seats the permanent organization was completed with E. M. Madden Chairman. A motion then prevailed to proceed to the nomination of Governor.

General George B. Sharpe, in an eloquent speech presented the name of Judge Folger; Mr. Pitts presented the name of Gov. Cornell and spoke some time in a very eloquent strain in support of the nomination; Erastus Clark nominated James W. Wadsworth, James Arkell nominated John H. Starin, of New York, Robert O'Conner nominated Gen. John C. Robinson, of Bingham.

A ballot was then ordered which resulted as follows: Folger 223; Cornell 180; Wadsworth 49; Starin 19; Robinson 6; necessary to choice 249; result received without any demonstration and convention settled down for another ballot.

The second ballot was then taken amid breathless silence. While the vote was being counted the Broome county delegates changed from Robinson to Folger, and this was quickly followed by other changes. Much confusion and excitement prevailed at this point, fifty men being on their feet announcing changes.

The chairman found it impossible to maintain order, and refused to recognize the delegates until quiet had been restored. For some minutes it looked as if the Convention was making a stampede towards Cornell, and the excitement was at fever heat, although order was restored. One Oneida county delegate announced the change of 11 delegates from Wadsworth to Cornell. Loud calls for another roll call were made, and confusion was renewed.

At this point Cookingham, of Oneida, withdrew the name of Wadsworth. The chair again announced that delegates must take their seats or business would be suspended. Several changes were then announced from Cornell to Folger, and a delegate said it was evident that Judge Folger had the nomination and moved the nomination be made by acclamation. The chairman said the motion was out of order unless no objection be made. The Secretary asked that the result of the last roll call be first announced, and on his objection to the resolution it was declared out of order.

The vote was announced as follows: Folger, 257; Cornell, 222; Wadsworth, 8; necessary to a choice, 249. The result was greeted with tumultuous cheers. Hon. Warner Miller, in brief speech, moved to make the nomination of Judge Folger unanimous, and the motion was carried amid applause. The Convention then took a recess till to-morrow forenoon.

CONNECTICUT REPUBLICANS.

W. H. Bulkely Nominated for Governor.

NEW HAVEN, Sept. 20. The Republican State Convention met in the Grand Opera House this forenoon and was called to order shortly after 10 by George M. Harmon, chairman of the State Committee. Gen. S. E. Merwin was elected temporary chairman and made a brief speech. The usual committees were appointed. Hon. Marshall Jewell was elected permanent chairman. After thanking the Convention for the honor conferred, he said;

"When we last met in convention we were in the midst of an active National campaign with trusted, able and wise leaders, opposed by unscrupulous, active and vigilant foes who resorted to every species of fraud, theft and forgery known to party warefare to elect their candidate for President, who, it is but fair to say, was much better than his party. Relying, as the Republican party always did and always can, upon the intelligence, wisdom and patriotism of the people, and thoroughly arousing the best sentiment of the American public by means of the printing press and the forum, all their nefarious schemes come to naught and we placed in the highest human attainable position one model man and statesman, Garfield, whose brief and brilliant occupancy of the executive chair and whose painful and heroic death marked an epoch in American history.

"Never was a truer sentiment expressed than this same great orator and statesman uttered on the occasion of the murder of the martyr Lincoln "God reigns and the Government at Washington still lives." And so we find it. The Convention at Chicago made no mistake. Our second choice was as good as our first. President Arthur is winning golden opinions from all sorts of people, by the wisdom, modesty and dignity with which he is administering the affairs of his office; his hands should be upheld by all honest and patriotic citizens in his attempts to reform the civil service, to reduce the rate of interest and taxation, and to check any unwise and extravagant expenditures of the public money. Our success in electing his successor will not be doubtful if the people do their duty as well as he is doing his. The duty of this Convention it to put in nomination a State ticket which I have not the slightest doubt we shall elect, and to declare anew our principles."

At the conclusion of the chairman's speech Gen. Wm. H. Bulkely was nominated Governor by acclamation.

A SMART OLD MAN. Mark Dennett, Esq., of Kittery, voted for Governor on the 11th inst. for the 75th time, never having missed casting his ballot for a candidate for that office since his first vote. Sixty-two of these votes were for Governor of Maine, the first thirteen having been thrown for Governor of Massachusetts, what is now Maine not having been separated from that State at that time. Mr. Dennett celebrated his 98th birthday on the 28th of August, and is remarkably hale for a man of his years; he spent the 7th inst. at York beach, with his daughter, Mrs. Burnham, and evidently enjoyed the day as much as any of the young people. One day a week or so ago, Mr. Benjamin Carter of Lewiston, who is himself eighty years old called at Mr. Dennett's house in Kittery to see a relative who happened to be there that day; and while they were conversing Mr. Dennett looked into the room and inquired if the lady wanted him to chop any more wood! She informed him that what he had chopped that morning was amply sufficient for the day's use, and introduced the two old gentlemen—who had never met before that either remembered, though living so near each other for so many years—and incidents of sixty or seventy years ago were recalled with pleasure to both.

THE FISH COMMISSION. Prof. Spencer F. Baird, United States Fish Commissioner, with eight members of his staff was in Boston, and made the rooms of the Boston Fish Bureau his headquarters. His assistants were Maj. T. E. Ferguson, Assistant Fish Commissioner; Prof. G. Brown Goode, Lieut. B. L. Tanner, U. S. N., Capt. J. W. Collins, Messrs. H. W. Elliot, and T. W. Smillie, artists, and Messrs. B. Earll and A. H. Clark. The party visited Boston for the purpose of taking views and sketches and gathering information of the fishing industries of that vicinity; to be used in the coming World's Fish Fair, which is to be held in London next May. Some seventy-five views were secured, including the market boats and fishermen at Commercial Wharf; clam fishermen with their boats, shooks and buckets; Commercial and T wharves; fish packing establishments; canning factories, with the operators at work, and the interior of a net and twine factory. The party separated, some going to New Bedford to take views of the whaling vessels and others to various points of interest along the Eastern coast. Capt. Collins left for the "tile" fishing grounds. Mr. Earll, with a photographer, visited Portland on Tuesday and took views of all the packing houses, also of the fish packing houses at the islands, with all the paraphernalia of the business. The United States exhibit at the London Fish Fair will be complete in every respect, and be far ahead of the show made at Berlin, where our exhibit carried the largest share of the honors.

FROM AROOSTOOK.

Presque Isle Notes.

During the past week, the weather has been quite rainy, a bad state of things for those who have not finished harvesting their grain. A few bright, clear days at this time would be most invaluable to the farmers. Potato digging has already commenced, though it will not fairly get under way before next week. It is said that the crop is yielding 200 bushels or more to the acre. The starch factories are paying 25 cts. per bushel for them "just as they grow," while sorted ones are bringing $1 25 per bbl. The abundance of this crop and the good demand therefore, will doubtless make money somewhat easier than it has been during the past year.

Political matters are rapidly assuming their accustomed quietness, the Fusionists having come to the conclusion that it is no use to kick against the inevitable, hence they are submitting with the best grace they can. In this county it was more than a Waterloo for them as they fully expected to elect their county ticket no matter which way the State at large went. The backbone of Fusionism is now broken and it is exceedingly doubtful if it can ever be united again. Also those individuals, like Daniel Stickney, who left the Republican party the present year and did their best to defeat it, now have ample time and opportunity to discover, if they can, just what their efforts amounted to in their frantic endeavors to annihilate the Republican ticket. Stickney, by the way, didn't receive a single vote either in Presque Isle, Mapleville or Easton, which showed just how popular he is at home.

It is said that Peter C. Keegan who was so confident of being our next Senator, has not been heard from since election. It is thought that he went so far up the saline stream that he has not yet returned. Mr. Parkhurst, the Senator elect, has 621 plurality, which is 153 more than Robie's plurality, and the largest received by any candidate. When Senator Frye was here he said the only fault he had to find with Aroostook was its Democratic majority. Aroostook now sends greeting to the honored Senator, and begs to inform him that that majority is now a thing of the past, and that henceforth the county proposes to remain loyal to the party of which he is such an able and distinguished member.

In the line of building, business has been and is fairly good this season. James H. Oak has found it necessary to add to his potato house another building 40 feet square in order to accommodate his increasing business. Messrs. Johnson & Phair have erected a potato house close by the railroad, 30 ft. by 60. Further down the track, N. Perry & Co., have put up a structure for similar purposes, 32 ft. by 50. This shows that potatoes will probably be in good demand here this fall and winter. In the village, Galen Chandler has erected a new store which presents a very tasteful appearance. The railroad company also have been doing a large amount of work in the vicinity of the depot. The track has been graded, several side tracks put in so that in addition to the main track there are now five sidings. On these to-day, I counted 33 cars. The company is also building a large boarding house just beyond the depot. As a whole the season has been very prosperous, and there is no serious cause for complaint. H.

AMUSEMENTS.

Hamlet.

An audience of magnificent proportions and embracing our best people assembled in the Opera House last evening to greet the favorite tragedian, Mr. Lawrence Barrett, in the role of Hamlet. Mr. Barrett has made numerous visitations to Bangor but this was his first appearance in our city in this celebrated tragedy. Invariably Mr. Barrett has had excellent support but on this occasion he brought a company of exceptional dramatic strength. The role of Hamlet gave good opportunity for Mr. Barrett to show to advantage his eminent powers and the enthusiastic applause, with which his efforts were greeted, demonstrated his ability as an actor and also shows the esteem in which he is held by our entertainment goers. The entire company acquitted themselves highly creditably but special mention should be made of Mr. Louis James who made a capital Ghost and Miss Marie Watowright who was a charming and effective Ophelia. The performance was greatly marred by noises in the gallery and also behind the curtain. The entertainment was in all respects one of great enjoyment to all present.

THE EXODUS TO EUROPE.

Thousands of people are going to Europe this summer, who have never before taken a sea voyage. That they will be sea-sick is very probable. That they may be attacked by cramps and colic is also probable. Some people when sick at sea, resort to brandy, which only makes matters worse. A few drops of Perry Davis' Pain Killer in a glass of water will settle the stomach better than a whole bottle of brandy. Captain Peterson, of Mauricetown, N. J., says, "I recommend its use on all vessels, either for long or short voyages, there are so many ailments that human flesh is heir to that it cures at once."

A RUNAWAY HAT.

BY REBECCA B PIERCE.

No story of this or of that
Is to me with such interest rife,
As the story I'll tell of a hat,
That changed the whole course of my life.

'Twas an evening in Sumner's rich prime,
Full of fragrance and beauty and grace;
I have cause to remember the time
To remember the time and the place.

I was out for a stroll on the street,
With no company save my cigar,
When a gustof wind, sudden and fleet,
Blew my hat like a feather afar.

To catch it I started in chase,
But it left me some distance behind,
Bare-headed, and red in the face,
I ran a wild race with the wind

On it went—oftentimes soaring high
And then in mud-puddle flat
Somebody set up a loud cry—
"Stop that hat! that runaway hat!"

With the dread that I'd see it no more,
I followed it on to my doom,
For it went through a wide-open door,
Straight into a young lady's room.

With one thought in my head—(that was all)—
I was led at the time to forget
That my unceremonious call
Was a breach of refined etiquette

For a moment, in awkward surprise,
I stood, rooted fast to the spot,
In the fair one who greeted my eyes,
My comical plight was forgot

I remember I stammered my name,
And my heart strangely beat, pit-pat,
And she smiled, and said sweetly, no blame
Was attached to myself or the hat.

Long years with their changes have passed,
Since I met that sweet maiden that night,
But that first meeting proved not the last,
For we both fell in love at first sight.

Since then, ah! how happy my life!
For we, who together were brought
So strangely, are husband and wife,
While catching a hat I was caught.

And oft when we're sitting to chat,
Her chair close to mine in its place,
I say, hence, 'twas lucky that hat
Did send me, that night, such a chase."

LATEST NOTES ABOUT THE FASHIONS.

For autumn wear the very richest lampas velvet, embroidered satins, moire antique, and moire Francais, with satin stripes brocaded in velvet, silk, satin, or velvet raised on gold or silver cloth, are to be used in the composition of the most elegant toilets. These rich fabrics can be employed for jackets, plastron-fronts, jubbers, or panels, and in some cases for very grand toilets they are to be used for dress-skirt en princesse. Such materials should never be draped, but allowed to fall in long, unbroken folds, with as few loops as possible, and as to trimming, there should be none except upon the bodice, and here it should be of lace of the richest description.

Travelling dresses are carried to great perfection this season in respect to details. They are simple and "bon gout" in style, beautifully made and fitted, the draperies are few, and arranged not to crush easily, and also with regard to comfort in wear If of pattern materials, the colors, though bright are, handsomely blended. There are many checks and stripes for the purpose among the English woolens, and the most attractive of these are in several dark shades, enlivened by hair stripes or small threads of gold or vermilion red. Upon some stylish imported travelling dresses, where this bit of brilliant coloring is seen, the vest or waistcoat is made of the same color, for instance, a dark bottle green English tweed, with indistinct mixtures of gold, wood brown, and cardinal, crossed with a fine line of very dark green. The coat is also finished with a large Directoire collar, and wide turn-over cuffs of velvet.

The greater number of manties and wraps this season are shorter than those of last year, or else longer in front and shorter at the back, to admit of the crinoline, which, despite the ridicule it meets with, is really required to support the full and increasing draperies of the skirt Satin, velvet, broche, and matelasse are quite the most fashionable materials for autumn manties, these being trimmed with full ruches, quillings, cascades of black lace jetted or plain, and ribbon-bows of moire or satin. A handsome Parisian model in dolman is called the "Scarborough," and is composed of rich satin brocade, the trimmings being chenille, applique bands and ruffs of Spanish lace. This is one of the newest shapes of the season, becoming to most figures, and for which any other material besides the one spoken of may be employed. The fronts are quite elaborately trimmed with alternate ruffles of the lace and applique bands of the chenille The centre of the back has a seam which tapers the shape most gracefully. This back piece terminates in a point several inches below the waste line. The sleeve form another point, and joins the back and front with a seam over the shoulder.

Toilets for wedding ceremonies are now of relative simplicity, the bridal robe par excellence, of white satin and costely lace, is by no means considered indispensable, and where the bride's prospective future does not include a series of evening entertainments, such a dress, requiring others to correspond is both extravagant and absurd One that can subsequently be utilized in the position of life she will thereafter be called upon to fill would be far more consistant and appropriate. A woman naturally looks her very best on her wedding-day, whereforo every woman needs to inquire, and the sacred writer, in the question, "Can a bride forget her attire?" presupposes the answer, but no maiden need fear to look a dowdy if she discards the somewhat useless and certainly costly white satin or moire for a more serviceable dress that later on shall be a useful addition to her wardrobe, rather than a mere cumberer of the ground While vigeons, white nuns' veiling, foulard, or Isatea, are all very pretty fabrics in fashionable use for comparatively inexpensive wedding toilets, and with drapings of creamy lace and garniture of flowers, a youthful, pretty bride can look quite as lovely in either of these dresses as she can in anything opaque white satin. A charming dress lately made for a quiet home wedding is composed of what can be done in the way of a simple yet beautiful wedding toilet 'The material in nuns' veiling, made with a demi-train—contrary to fashionable rule. Around the foot of the skirt is a ruching of white surah cut bias, which, after being deeply fringed on both sides, was formed into double box pleats, so that the edges of the ruch lying closely together gave it the appearance of a downy mass of white feathers. Above this is a Grecian tunic of the white veiling, the chaste and artistic arrangement of the soft upright folds giving a most graceful and statuesque effect to the whole. The bodice is of white surah, cut square in the neck, and trimmed with cascades of cream-white lace. The half-long sleeves are likewise adorned. The veil is of Spanish bobbinet, simply hemmed, and fastened back with roses and orange blossoms, a large cluster of the same natural flowers to be pinned at the belt and carried in the hand the day of the wedding. A second wedding dress for a young lady, rich in faith and affection, but affluent in no other respect, is being finished for an early October wedding, and a more beautiful, inexpensive toilet can hardly be imagined. The dress is made of pale golden fawn-colored silk. The edge of the skirt is "battlemented"—i. e., cut in square blocks—and beneath is a treble ruche of lace, chosen with special reference to harmony in regard to the shade of the dress itself. The skirt drapes the slender, elegant figure very closely and gracefully, and round the hips are paniers of the silk, edged with a ruffle of the lace. The ends of this drapery are drawn up in front by a series of runners into the space of a span. The bodice is pointed front and back, and is laced across the bust. It is cut in a long V shape, with a delicate ruche of lace bordering the opening. The tight-fitting sleeves are trimmed to correspond. A double row of opal-tinted Roman pearls will be worn around the throat, fastened with a handsome pearl clasp. A pair of long white Swedish kid gloves, white kid slippers with stockings of pale gold silk, complete a toilet which will not be less beautiful and appropriate than the special occasion it was designed for demands.

A COUPLE OF BOSTON LADIES Discuss WHEAT BITTERS as a Public Thoroughfare.

[From the Boston Globe.]

A reporter happened to hear the following conversation a day or two since, between two ladies who were walking on Tremont st

"Sue, why do people patent almost everything now a days?"

"To protect themselves in its sure, and to realize the profits incident to manufacture, I presume. Do you ever see reforms, Amelia, particularly?"

"Well, I was thinking of Wheat Bitters Ma and I have used it for years for dyspepsia and malaria, whilst our cook has been cured of neuralgia and peculiar weakness by its use"

"Yes, I know they are good, Amelia. I know they have cured Mr. W. A Whitney, of New York, 23 W. 27th St, of dyspepsia, nervous prostration, and lots of others, too. But what is it you are trying to find out?"

"I want to know what patent there is in its preparation, Sue."

"Well, analysis shows that in preparing wheat for food, the larger part of its most valuable properties is lost In Wheat Bitters these phosphates are extracted directly from the wheat, and preserved in solution with the most approved vegetable bitters"

"What do you mean, Sue, by phosphates?"

"There can be no thought without phosphates, there can be no vigor of life without phosphates, and Wheat Bitters contains these phosph
